multi-scale fracture of random heterogeneous materials - heterogeneous materials. many natural and man-made heterogeneous materials have a random internal structure comprised of two or more phases. there are two challenging problems in the study of a heterogeneous material: (1) modelling the microstructure of the material (quintanilla and torquato 1997; roberts random heterogeneous materials via texture synthesis - random heterogeneous materials are ubiquitous in nature and engineering. the material heterogeneity stems from presence of at least two distinct interacting phases (solid, liquid, gas, or void) within the same material volume. the random nature of the materials is determined by underlying physical and stochastic processes that are often random heterogeneous materials: microstructure and ... - errata for "random heterogeneous materials: microstructure and macroscopic properties" by s. torquato (springer-verlag, new york, 2002) updated on july 18, 2005 on homogenization of random heterogeneous materials - heterogeneous materials in real applications are neither periodic nor regularly packed and randomness must be incorporated into their microstructural descriptions. thus, it is the objective of ... stochastic design and control in random heterogeneous ... - stochastic design and control in random heterogeneous materials 3 the the probability of event a by employing the indicator function of the complementary event a c in place of u in equation (2.1)). efficient methods for homogenization of random ... - coefficients of random heterogeneous materials. it provides much better approximate effective coefficients than other boundary conditions. methods for homogenization of rhms it is more flexible than other boundary conditions because of the adjusting factor. it is more suitable for random heterogeneous materials with high contrast. 52 percolation and jamming in random heterogeneous materials ... - the micro-structure of many random heterogeneous materials such as granular matter, powders, ... percolation and jamming in random heterogeneous materials with competing length scales 31.
